Recall on Banana Republic Coats

Many Banana Republic men's wool winter coats, made in China, were recently tested by non-certified shatnez testers and found to be shatnez free.

Unfortunately these coats were worn and, when later retested, linen threads were found in the gray fabric under the collar!

Any Banana Republic coat (including raincoats) that has gray fabric under the collar with rows of topstitching, as illustrated in the picture on the left, should immediately be retested by a professional, Certified Shatnez Laboratory.

In conclusion: You should verify that your Shatnez Tester is certified, constantly updated and in contact with other professionals in the field.
